

Toys for Children with Special Needs

When children play, they learn about their world. Engaging in play facilitates socialization, language and communication, and movement skills. To provide students with special needs increased play opportunities, battery operated toys can be adapted so that children can play with the toys by activating a switch.

Children enjoy engaging in play with toys that have sound and movement. To increase our library of battery-operated toys, please donate toys that can be adapted for switch access. These toys will be available for check-out by teachers in the Knox County School System who are teaching preschool and school-age students with special needs.
